Applicants who are within five points of gaining Fellowship may submit an application to ANZIIF requesting consideration of their individual case. Applicants will need to provide evidence that their circumstances are worthy of review and consideration for the discretionary award of five points. For example, demonstrated exceptional leadership in the industry beyond the scope of what is outlined in the Fellowship Passport. ANZIIF's Fellowship Review Committee has the discretion to review the application and determine whether Fellowship will be granted.

The Fellowship Passport system considers a variety of factors in an applicant's professional knowledge and experience, including: postgraduate qualifications, industry contribution, relevant university studies and professional development that contribute to the requirements for CIP Fellowship. Each factor is assigned a specific value using a points-based system. Applicants need to have completed an Institute award course in addition to the completion of Masters of Applied Finance to achieve 100 points. Points are cumulative provided that the qualifications attained are different.

Conditions:

Prospective CIP Fellows are able to allocate and combine the points under each category, as relevant to their situation, to attain the required 100 points to be eligible for CIP Fellowship. Applicants will be required to supply certified documentation supporting their application.

- * Points may only be accrued once for undertaking one post graduate qualification.
-  Points may be accrued per specialisation. However if you have gained a qualification whereby 50% of subjects is cross credited from another qualification, points cannot be counted twice.
-  Points can only be accrued once for undertaking ASIC compliance modules. Similarly, an overseas applicant can only accrue points once for undertaking other overseas law and regulation training recognised by the Institute.
- * Special consideration may be granted for unique circumstances by written application to the CEO.
